“ We first met Austin at Bear and Mary Alice Woodrum's house. Even after meeting him for the first time, Austin was one of those people you felt you had always known. He was multi-talented, loved animals and plant life, and was generous with his time and energy. He was on this earth for much too short a time, but the world is a much better place for his being on it. Those who knew him are fortunate indeed.##imported-begin##Linda Carman and Linda Haynes##imported-end##

“ Nell, It seems like a short time ago, when Jimmie and I first married and we visited your home in NA and Austin was a little boy. You showed us where you were digging out a room under the house and he crawled in the opening. I am so sorry you lost him. He was a fine son, handsome, and I regret our families did not stay closer in touch for he has another Great Aunt Annie Lou Carter 92 that he probably does not remember. Our prayers are with you. “ *Austin was the best neighbor a person could ever hope to have. Many times he stopped what he was doing to come help me. He was also quick to loan his tractor and tools. When not working around the house, we had long talks about animals, politics and life in general. I was always impressed that he looked at issues from all sides, then formed a strong opinion.
