“ My first time meeting Joyce was at First Assembly of God in Augusta. Pastor Moore asked her to sing. Although she was unrehearsed, she sang like an angel. Well, she's home singing the song the angels can not sing. The song in my heart today is: Heaven Will Surely Be Worth It All. Until we meet again, Love you, Joyce.

“ I have so many memories of Joyce...so very many. But I will tell you all of one that took place within the last 2 years. It was just months after my mom passed away and my heart was (as it remains) so totally broken. I found myself truly missing the hug/love of my mother. It was a Friday morning and I was getting ready for work and I set the alarm to the house and realized that I had forgotten something. Ran to try a beat the alarm and ended up fighting the front door handle with my eye socket! The handle one and I had a swollen shut eye every color of the rainbow. Stacey had just pulled into the front yard after spending most of the day in the emergency room getting treatment and convincing law enforcement that my husband did not hit me.

I got out of the car and noticed a truck pull in the driveway. It was Pastor John and Joyce. They were returning to me a casserole dish that I had taken to their house for some reason or other. She saw my eye and handed the dish to Pastor John and took me into her arms in only the way a mother could. I felt the love of a mother's hug. It didn't matter to her that I was not her child. She would never know how much that hug meant to me and how often I have thought about it over the last two years. It touched me because it felt like my mother's hug. So sweet. So selfless and so full of love!

Joyce was always a beautiful creation of God and I can only imagine the conversations she is having with all the ones that we have loved and lost! She is in Glory!
