“ Nana Hall, you are a true Gem and while Heaven Received a beautiful Angel when God brought you home to Him, my family and I were blessed to have known you - an Angel here on earth. You opened your heart and home to my husband and our kids, who quickly took you on as their "Nana" We loved visiting you, and you coming to visit with us. Your charm, smile, humour, and kind spirit is a gift you so lovingly shared with everyone you met. Your daughters have truly carried on your legacy, as well as your grandchildren....you will never be forgotten. I know you are celebrating with Jesus, and in the arms of your saviour ! Love you always

“ My first memory of Pam Hall was when I was in Kindergarten with her daughter Mary, and the mothers created a carpool. I loved when it was her turn to drive so that I could listen to her lovely Mary Poppins accent and her unique laugh. And laugh she did, including later when I was a teenager going through those scary changes. Pamela swooped into a room one day and sang to me her own rendition of the song, "This girl is a woman now," a song I imagine she sang to all four of her beautiful daughters along the way, then to the granddaughters. Across the years I thought of her as somehow fearless; a lioness with her cubs and with beloved husband Ralph. The last time I saw her she was reading stories to children-- including my own son--in the middle of St. Bartholomew church's pumpkin patch. Godspeed, Pam, and thank you for coming across the pond to stay those many years ago.

This describes my Nana perfectly!! Both my mom and Nana sang that song to me too. I forgot about how much she loved reading to children at the pumpkin patch, she use to do it every year.
