“ The loss of a loved one is powerfully devastating. There are no magic words that can ease the emptiness of the loss. But there are magic people that give us the strength to make it through today, tomorrow, the next day and subsequent days.

I am reminded of the story of a man, who was questioning his faith, and was shown his life, by God, through footsteps on the beach. When things were going fine in his life there were two sets of footsteps, the man's and God's, walking side by side in the sand. When things were hard to cope with, there was only one set of footsteps in the sand, the man thought they were only his footsteps and that he was alone during those times, but God let him know that those were the times when he was being carried through the hard periods in life.

Remember during this hard time you are not alone, no matter how it feels. God has given you friends, family and even acquaintances that are full of magic, love and support to help you find peace while he carries you through the hard times. Before you know it you will make it through today, tomorrow, the next day and subsequent days by feeling the strength of the people that are important in your life.

*I am sorry for your loss and my love to you all,
